2. Write three words you did not catch: 1 _____ 2 _____ 3 _____

ANSWERS

MODEL ANSWER The black cat (bad luck in the USA, good luck in Britain). Words will vary; they are the student's own gap list. Use them in 1.2.

TRANSCRIPT — PART 1 — TEACHER ONLY, DON'T SHOW

Welcome. Today we begin with four superstitions that are well known in the United States.

A superstition is a belief that something brings good luck or bad luck. Some people believe in superstitions. Other people say, "That's silly." But many of them still avoid the ladder!

Number one: the black cat. In the United States, many people believe that a black cat brings bad luck if it walks across your path. Some people are so afraid of it that they turn around and walk the other way. But in Britain, many people think the opposite. For them, a black cat brings good luck.

— segment P1A ends here —

Number two: the ladder. Many people believe it is bad luck to walk under a ladder. They are afraid of it, so they always walk around. Some people say a ladder against a wall makes a triangle, and the triangle was a holy shape in ancient Egypt. Nobody knows if this is true.

Number three: the mirror. If you break a mirror, you will have seven years of bad luck. It is almost like a small curse.

Number four: knock on wood. After you say something good, like "I never get ill," you knock on wood. Then your good luck will not disappear. In Britain and Ireland, people say "touch wood" instead. None of these four superstitions is only American.

So, do you believe in superstitions?

Listen.

1. How many ideas about the origin of Halloween do you hear? _____
2. Write three words you did not catch: 1 _____ 2 _____ 3 _____

ANSWERS
MODEL ANSWER Two (Samhain / a Christian holiday).

TRANSCRIPT — PART 2 — TEACHER ONLY, DON'T SHOW

Halloween is on the thirty-first of October, and it has a spooky history. Where does it come from? Nobody knows for sure, but historians have two main ideas.

The first idea is that Halloween comes from an old festival called Samhain. It was celebrated in Ireland and Scotland at the end of the harvest. Some historians think that people believed spirits came closer to the living at this time.

The second idea is that Halloween began as a Christian holiday. The first of November was a special day for the saints. The evening before was called All Hallows' Eve, and later this became the word "Halloween". The second of November is a day to remember all the dead. So Halloween is the start of a three-day season.

— segment P2A ends here —

Many Halloween customs are very old. Hundreds of years ago, poor people in Britain went from door to door and asked for small cakes. In return, they prayed for the dead. Some people think this was the first trick-or-treat. In Scotland and Ireland, people also wore a costume and visited their neighbours.

In the nineteenth century, many Irish and Scottish people moved to America and took their customs with them. In Ireland, people carved a face in a turnip and put a candle inside. In America, they used a pumpkin instead, because a pumpkin is bigger and softer. This is the jack-o'-lantern. People still put a jack-o'-lantern in the window today. There is an Irish story about Stingy Jack, a man who tricked the devil. Some people say this is where the name "jack-o'-lantern" comes from. But it is only a story.

The words "trick or treat" first appeared in print in 1917, in a Canadian newspaper. By the 1930s, trick-or-treating was popular in the United States. Today, children put on a costume and go from house to house. Many adults visit a haunted house for fun. It is a house full of pretend ghosts and monsters. Some people say that real haunted houses exist, but there is no proof. A spooky night is exciting, and a little fear can be fun.

3. Film 3 Friday the Thirteenth: what the producer wanted: _____
4. Write three words you did not catch: 1 _____ 2 _____ 3 _____

ANSWERS

MODEL ANSWER Film 1: a young patient's cold stare, seen in a hospital in Kentucky. Film 2: an old man staring through a window / a bully named Fred Krueger / news about refugees dying in their sleep (any of these). Film 3: to copy the success of Halloween (no real event behind it).

© Ondrej

TRANSCRIPT — PART 3 — TEACHER ONLY, DON'T SHOW

Now three famous horror films. Each one has a real story behind it.

Film number one: Halloween, from 1978. In the film, a boy kills his sister on Halloween night. Fifteen years later, he comes back to his town. He wears a white mask. His name is Michael Myers.

Here is a surprise about the mask. It was a mask of Captain Kirk, from the television series Star Trek. The film crew bought it in a shop and painted it white.

And here is the real story. The director, John Carpenter, visited a hospital in Kentucky when he was a student. There he met a young patient with a cold, empty stare. Carpenter found the stare creepy, and he used it for his character. The film is not based on a true story, but the stare was real.

— segment P3A ends here —

Film number two: A Nightmare on Elm Street, from 1984. In this film, a killer attacks teenagers in their dreams. If they die in the dream, they die in real life. The idea of a killer in your dreams gives many people goosebumps. The teenagers are terrified of falling asleep, because that is where the killer finds them. His name is Freddy Krueger. He has a burned face, a red and green sweater, and a glove with knives.

The director, Wes Craven, was inspired by real life. As a boy, he saw an old man outside his window. The man stared at him, and then walked away. A stranger staring through a window is a creepy idea, and it gives many people goosebumps. Craven also named the killer after a boy who bullied him at school.

There is a sadder story too. In the late 1970s and early 1980s, a newspaper in Los Angeles wrote about refugees from Southeast Asia who died in their sleep. Craven said that one story was about a boy who was afraid to sleep. The boy died in the middle of a nightmare. At the time, doctors could not explain these deaths. Today, many doctors think that hidden heart problems explain a lot of them, but not every case. Doctors later gave these deaths a name. In one study from 2011, about eight in ten cases had a heart problem.

— segment P3B ends here —

Film number three: Friday the Thirteenth, from 1980. Young people work at a summer camp called Camp Crystal Lake, and someone is killing them, one by one. As far as we know, the film is not based on a real event. The producer was inspired by the success of Halloween, and he wanted to make something similar. It worked. The film cost less than a million dollars, and it made almost sixty million.

The title comes from a superstition. In many Western countries, Friday the thirteenth is an unlucky day. Nobody knows for sure where this idea comes from. In 1881, in New York, a group called the Thirteen Club met on Friday the thirteenth. They wanted to show that the superstition was false. In Spanish-speaking countries and in Greece, the unlucky day is Tuesday the thirteenth. In Italy, it is Friday the seventeenth. Some people are terrified of Friday the thirteenth, and there is a very long name for this fear.

TRANSCRIPT — PART 4 — TEACHER ONLY, DON'T SHOW

This is a true story, and it is a famous mystery.

In January 1959, ten hikers, mostly university students from what was then the Soviet Union, went on a winter trip in the Ural Mountains. Their leader was a twenty-three-year-old student called Igor Dyatlov. They were experienced hikers, and the weather was freezing. Early in the trip, one student, Yuri, felt ill, so he went home. Nine people continued. On the first of February, a snowstorm came. The group stopped on an open mountain slope and put up their tent for the night.

— segment P4A ends here —

Weeks later, the group had not come back. At home, the families waited with growing dread. They asked for a search. Finally, a search party went up the mountain. On the twenty-sixth of February, they found the tent. It was empty and half covered in snow. All the shoes and clothes were still inside. Then the searchers saw something strange. The tent had been cut open, from the inside.

Footprints led away from the tent, towards a forest. Some of the people were wearing only socks. The footprints went on for about five hundred metres. Then the snow covered them. There was an eerie silence on the mountain.

— segment P4B ends here —

At the edge of the forest, under a tall tree, the searchers found a small fire that had gone out. Two of the hikers were lying there, almost without clothes. They had died from the cold. Branches high in the tree were broken. Between the tree and the tent, the searchers found three more bodies. It looked as if they were trying to walk back. The night had been extremely cold, about thirty degrees below zero. Five hikers were dead, and four were still missing.

— segment P4C ends here —

The last four hikers were not found until May. They were under four metres of snow, in a ravine near the tree. Three of them had very serious injuries to the chest and head. But there were no wounds on the outside of their bodies. Some were wearing clothes that belonged to their dead friends.

The investigators wrote that the group died because of a "compelling natural force". Then the case was closed, and the files were kept secret.

Yuri was the only person from the trip who came home. For sixty years, people asked: what was this force? Many scientists have tried to explain it. In 2020, Russian officials said it was an avalanche. In 2021, two scientists in Switzerland said that a small avalanche could explain some of the injuries. One of them said: "We don't want to pretend that we have solved it." But many people disagree. The most unnerving detail is still the tent. Why did experienced hikers cut their own tent open? Why did they run out into the freezing night, some of them without shoes? Something made them run. They were probably petrified. Nobody can explain it for sure. It is a spine-chilling mystery.

ANSWERS

MODEL ANSWER The lawyer wanted to say that Johnson was not guilty because he was possessed. The judge refused (no evidence), so the jury never heard it.

TRANSCRIPT — PART 5 — TEACHER ONLY, DON'T SHOW

This last story is a true court case from the United States. A real man died, so we tell it carefully.

In February 1981, in Brookfield, Connecticut, a young man called Arne Johnson killed his landlord, Alan Bono, with a knife. Bono died a few hours later. Johnson was charged with murder.

Before this, a local family had said that their young son was possessed by a demon. They asked two famous investigators of the supernatural, Ed and Lorraine Warren, for help. The day after the killing, Lorraine Warren claimed that Johnson was possessed too.

— segment P5A ends here —

At the trial, Johnson's lawyer first wanted to say that Johnson was not guilty because he was possessed. But the judge refused. The judge said there was no evidence that possession could be a defence. So the jury never heard that idea.

In the end, the jury found Johnson guilty of manslaughter, not murder. The verdict came in November 1981, and the sentence in December. He was sentenced to ten to twenty years in prison, and he served about five.

After the trial, the case became famous as "the devil made me do it", and it later appeared in books and films. But many people doubt this claim of possession. One member of the family later said that the Warrens' story was a hoax. The court never accepted it. It is a sinister story, but the only thing we know for sure is that a real man died.

DO Optional, teacher-only. Search the studio's own channel: "Halloween 1978 official trailer" · "A Nightmare on Elm Street 1984 official trailer" · "Friday the 13th 1980 official trailer". Watch it first, check the age rating and the link. No links in the sold files.

SAY
"It looks ... / It reminds me of ... / I would feel ... if I saw this at night."

GOAL Use the fear words to describe a short trailer clip.

ACTIVITY 6 Can-do check

DO Compare the ticks with the promise in the Teacher Guide.

GOAL Let students tick what they can now do.
